Trend and Analysis

As expected, the global pandemic has had an extreme negative impact on tourism activities, most notably the occupancy rates. There are a variety of scenarios that forecast the tourism recovery most relying on pent up demand as well as widespread vaccination and an effective treatment program for those recovering from COVID-19.

The County hotel occupancy rate, revenue per available room (RevPAR) and average daily rate (ADR) are expected to recover to national pre-pandemic levels and should return to a steady growth pattern into the near future. Like other industries, hotels historically have followed the traditional business cyclical performance pattern: peak, contraction, trough, expansion, and back to peak. Research shows that the U.S lodging industry reached the peak of its current cycle in CY 2018. History had called for a downturn in CY 2020 or CY 2021 but no one could foresee impact of a global pandemic. If conditions are favorable for national/international travel as expected, there should be a sustained expansion starting in CY 2022.
